Several Philadelphia police officers shot

The shooter appeared to have a high-powered weapon and a significant amount of ammunition.

Six Philadelphia police officers were shot and wounded on Wednesday in a shootout during a drug raid on a house and negotiators were urging the shooter to surrender as two officers remained trapped inside the home, police said.

Three hours into the standoff, Philadelphia Police said all of the wounded officers were in stable condition with non-life-threatening injuries.

Police were serving a drugs warrant at a North Philadelphia home at around 4:30 p.m. when the male shooter entered the house and opened fire on the officers.

"Many of them had to escape through windows and doors to escape from a barrage of bullets," Philadelphia Police Commissioner Richard Ross told a news conference.

The shooter continued to fire on a SWAT truck parked outside the residence in the Nicetown-Tioga neighborhood hood as officers tried to negotiate his surrender, Ross said.

Police called the man's phone, talked with him on a bullhorn and involved a family member in the negotiations, Ross added.

"I'm worried about a potential hostage situation and we've got to get that resolved," said Ross, adding that he believed the two officers trapped inside the home were not wounded.

"We are trying to get him to come out peacefully," Ross said, declining to confirm whether there was more than their homes and stay out of the area after hundreds of rounds were exchanged.

Local television station Fox 29 reported some kind of movement by police at around 7:30 p.m., when a large bang was heard.

Two other officers were also injured in a car accident while responding to the shooting.

There were reports the shooter was livestreaming the incident on Facebook.

Co-working start-up WeWork files $900M loss, IPO next

2 WeWork owner The We Company published detailed financial statements for the first time on Wednesday, revealing breakneck revenue growth and soaring losses, as it prepares for an initial public offering as early as next month. The IPO, which could raise several billion dollars, will be a key test of investor appetite for fast-growing, money-losing start-ups. "IPO investors have already been burnt by Lyft and Uber. They are going to be cautious about WeWork," said Kathleen Smith, principal at Renaissance Capital. We Company, founded in 2010, said in a filing with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission that it lost more than $900 million in the first half of 2019, up 25 percent from a year earlier, even as revenue doubled to $1.54 billion. Mexico pushes US to rule El Paso shooting terrorism act

3 Mexico's government on Wednesday doubled down on its assertion that the Aug. 3 mass shooting in El Paso, Texas, was an act of terrorism against Mexicans and urged the United States to ensure the incident was designated as such. Speaking after meetings on Tuesday between U.S. and Mexican government officials about the case, Mexican Foreign Minister Marcelo Ebrard told a regular government news conference that steps needed to be taken to prevent future killings. "It's very important to persevere, to specify, clarify and demand that measures are taken so that this is not repeated, and the first measure is to classify it for what it is, an act of terrorism that seeks to take Mexican lives," Ebrard said. Twenty-two people lost their lives in the shooting at a Walmart store in the U.S. border city. REUTERS

Watchdog: Canada PM Trudeau violated ethics code

4 Prime Minister Justin Trudeau and officials in his government improperly tried to influence a corporate legal case, Canada's top ethics watchdog said on Wednesday in a politically damaging assessment that could hurt his chances of winning October's general election. Trudeau's team attempted to circumvent a decision by federal prosecutors that construction giant SNC-Lavalin Group

Inc. should face trial on corruption charges, independent ethics commissioner Mario Dion said in a scathing report. While Dion's conclusions could be politically damning, his judgment that Trudeau violated ethical standards carries no legal implications beyond a possible small fine. The scandal battered Trudeau's image as a youthful progressive at the helm of a government that had vowed to be open and transparent. REUTERS

found guilty of Stockholm brawl

The American rapper, who claimed self-defense, has been spared jail time.

U.S. rapper A$AP Rocky was convicted in Sweden on Wednesday of assault over a Stockholm street brawl, but spared time in jail after a high-profile trial that had led President Donald Trump to accuse Sweden of treating him unfairly.

A$AP Rocky, whose real name is Rakim Mayers, and two members of his entourage were found guilty of kicking and beating 19-year-old Mustafa Jafari after an argument. But the court said allegations they hit him with a glass bottle, which might have brought a tougher sentence, were not proven.

"In an overall assessment, the court finds that the assault has not been of such a serious nature that a prison sentence must be chosen," Senior Judge Per Lennerbrant told a courtroom packed with reporters.

The rapper, who shot to fame with his 2011 debut "Live.Love.A$AP," was not in court for the verdict. He was released on Aug. 2 after 31 days in jail and a three-day trial, in what legal experts said at the time was a sign the judge was likely not to jail him further.

The court said the fact that the defendants had no prior convictions over the past five years and had already spent time in custody awaiting trial meant they would not serve further time in prison or pay any fine.

Prosecutor Daniel Suneson told Reuters he had not yet decided whether he would appeal any part of the verdict.

"The court has been of the same view as myself, with one big exception, which is whether or not a blow was dealt with a glass bottle," he said. "Beyond that I feel the court made an accurate assessment."

Slobodan Jovicic, Mayers' Swedish lawyer, told reporters he was disappointed in the conviction but said the court had ruled in favor of his client regarding some aspects of the case.

"We didn't succeed all the way, but on the other hand we got many points proven," he said, adding that he had contacted his client about the verdict via text message and would speak to him later on Wednesday.

SELF-DEFENSE

The case drew global attention, particularly after Trump offered to vouch for the rapper's bail and asked Swedish Prime Minister Stefan Lofven to help free him. Sweden does not have a bail system and Lofven pointed to Sweden's independent judiciary, saying he could not intervene.

Trump tweeted messages saying he was disappointed in Lofven and demanding: "Treat Americans fairly!"

Other celebrities, including Kim Kardashian and Rod Stewart, had also spoken out in support of the rapper.

During the trial, both the defense and prosecution made liberal use of video taken on mobile phones during the altercation. The prosecution said that after an argument, Mayers threw Jafari to the ground, after which he and the two others kicked and punched the teenager.

Mayers said he acted in self-defense after the teenager attacked his bodyguard.

The court said it had been proven that the artist and two of his party had hit and kicked the plaintiff as he lay on the ground, and discounted their claims of self-defense.

Mayers, best known for his song "Praise the Lord," had been in Stockholm for a concert at the time of the fight. He had to cancel several shows across Europe due to his detention.

He is due in neighboring Finland on Aug. 16 to play the Blockfest festival in Tampere. REUTERS

Jeffrey Epstein accuser sues financier's estate, as prison officials probe suicide

Jeffrey Epstein took his own life at a federal prison Saturday, prompting calls for an investigation. REUTERS

Accuser Jennifer Araoz said she was just 14 when Epstein's sexual abuse began.

A New York woman who said she was sexually assaulted by Jeffrey Epstein at the age of 14 sued the disgraced financier's estate and a former associate on Wednesday, as prison officials began an internal review of how Epstein died in an apparent suicide last week.

In the first of an expected wave of lawsuits, Jennifer Araoz, 32, said she had just entered high school in 2001 when an Epstein associate brought her to the financier's mansion on Manhattan's Upper East Side, beginning a grooming process that led to months of sexual abuse including a "brutal rape."

The lawsuit in New York County Supreme Court is among the first of a series by women made possible by the state's Child Victims Act, which opened a one-year window to sue over alleged sexual abuse regardless of how long ago it occurred.

Epstein, who once counted Republican President Donald Trump and Democratic former President Bill Clinton as friends, was found unresponsive in his cell on Saturday morning at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in Lower Manhattan, according to the Federal Bureau of Prisons. A source said the well-connected money manager was found hanging by the neck.

Psychologists began on Tuesday studying how the suicide took place, according to a person familiar with the matter, reflecting Federal Bureau of Prisons' policy calling for a "psychological reconstruction" following a suicide.

Another team at the MCC on Wednesday began an "after action" review, which is normally triggered by significant events such as the death of a high-profile inmate, the person familiar with the matter said. That review will be headed by a Bureau of Prisons director from another region.

The reviews are separate from investigations by the FBI and U.S. Department of Justice's inspector general and Jack Donson, a former Bureau of Prisons corrections case manager, said the Bureau of Prisons would probably "take care of business this week."

Epstein had been arrested on July 6 and pleaded not guilty to charges of sex trafficking involving dozens of underage girls between 2002 and 2005. Prosecutors said he recruited girls to give him massages, which became sexual in nature.

Araoz's lawsuit says former Epstein associate Ghislaine Maxwell facilitated Epstein's abuse of several girls by overseeing their recruitment and "ensuring that approximately three girls a day were made available to him for his sexual pleasure."

A lawyer who had represented Epstein did not immediately respond to requests for comment. Lawyers for Maxwell did not immediately respond to similar requests.

The other three unnamed defendants in Araoz's lawsuit — all women who allegedly worked for Epstein in New York — are a maid, a secretary and a "recruiter" who helped procure underage girls for him.

Araoz told reporters on a conference call she was angry that Epstein's death meant he would never face her in court but wanted to exercise her legal rights in civil court. REUTERS

New bill may bring hostels back to New York City

New York City could make hostels legal under a bill, set to be introduced this week in City Council, that would permit the super-budget accommodations to operate again after a state law made them illegal, the Wall Street Journal reports. The bill would provide hostels with their own separate department and classification under city law. The city's hostels all but disappeared after the 2010 law covering multiple dwellings took aim at illegal Airbnb rentals.

The 2010 bill was a blow to hostels, which offer communal lodgings often sought by younger travelers looking for a cheap place to stay in an expensive city. Hostels never fell under clear definitions in the city's building codes; before the ban, they were subject to the same regulations as apartments. The changing regulatory landscape left a very limited number of hostels in the city.

garet Chin, a Democrat who represents parts of Manhattan, say a lack of more affordable choices makes NYC less accessible to tourists, and that re-authorizing hostels could help the city fight illegal Airbnb rentals which many argue limit the city's stock of affordable housing. With the city's hotels averaging $200 a night at the very least, Gjonaj said: "We want to give people another option and not take away from our current housing stock or current hotels."

The new hostel bill would have the city's Department of Consumer Affairs create an independent office and director to license and regulate hostels. The office would handle complaints and enforce safety standards. The bill defines a hostel as any building with over 70 percent of its rooms identified as hostel units.

A similar bill was introduced in 2015 but failed to make it to a council vote. A bill passed in 2018 — after the hostel ban — requiring Airbnb to disclose the names and addresses of hosts to a city agency has made headway in keeping the home-stay juggernaut in check.

But will the thrifty traveler's communal hostel model work in the current tourism landscape? Some of the city's hostel owners have been reworking the way hostels are perceived by adding on-trend design elements and amenities like yoga and bars — similar in spirit to the growing trend of co-working and co-living.

Rafael Museri, the co-founder of the hostel and hotel company Selina, whose hostels offer a mix of rooms at different price points, plans to open three hostels in Manhattan within the next year under the city's current laws: "Buildings that offer more variety of rooms generate more revenue and open the door of New York to an amazing and global crowd that currently can't enjoy this beautiful city. We just want people to have fun and socialize."

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

“Don’t Get ANY Surgery Until You See This...”

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best “Treatment Formula” For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going to be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

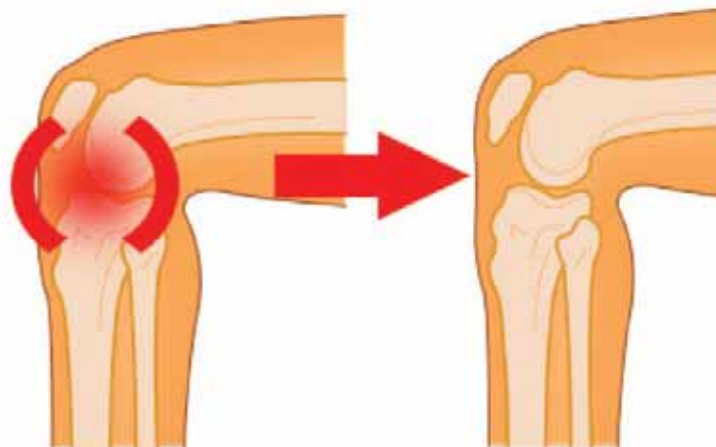

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD “Treatment Formula” A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW...

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these “gel injections” without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patient. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our “Treatment Formula.”

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action... step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

ESPN's Matthew Berry on 'Fantasy Life'

Berry's 'Fantasy Life' app is giving sports bettors a sizable advantage.

MATT BURKE

Obtaining information that few others have gives you a huge leg up when it comes to wagering on sports. And with more and more states legalizing sports betting, it's no surprise that many companies are jockeying for top billing in the sports information game.

One start-up that is being financially backed by pro athletes and was co-founded by Matthew Berry, the premier mind in fantasy football at ESPN for years, is Fantasy Life, which promises users industry-leading breaking-news alerts that "beat competitors by up to 15 minutes." Users can also post, poll other players, and chat about sports on the Fantasy Life app.

"I've always loved the community aspect of fantasy. So I wanted to create a space for fantasy players and sports gamblers alike to interact, share advice, and first full football season with the real product, but when Carlos Hyde was traded from the Browns out of the blue, we beat everyone to the news by almost ten minutes. Our users all snatched up Nick Chubb (Hyde's backup) and he lead them to many fantasy titles. People were thrilled — that was help each other win." Berry told MetroBet in an exclusive interview. "And then I wanted tools that could give our users a clear-cut advantage, which is where our industry-leading alerts come in. In terms of a real thing, it's been growing for most of our a watershed moment for us. When you read our reviews on iTunes (we are at 4.8 stars) that gets mentioned a lot."

"Athletes are the most competitive

Three cyclists struck in one afternoon

All three victims were able to walk away with their lives.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER
Rebecca.Glasser@metro.us

Three cyclists were injured in one accident-filled afternoon Tuesday, adding to the alarming uptick in vehicle-versus-bike accidents.

One cyclist became "logged under a fire truck in Prospect Heights, Brooklyn," ABC reported. Another cyclist was hit on the Upper East Side at 96th Street when a car turned a corner. Finally, around 4:30 p.m., a cyclist was hit by an MTA bus at 6th Avenue and Central Park South. All the crashes reportedly happened in areas without protected bike lanes.

Outlets reported that the victims were able to walk away from the incidents, but sadly that hasn't been the case for 19 NYC cyclists this year, nearly double the rate of those killed last year. Although biking incidents have been common throughout the entire city, Brooklyn holds the title for the most casualties related to bike deaths. The Department of Transportation (DOT) noted that 71 percent of bicycle fatalities in 2019 so far occurred in Brooklyn.

DOT reported that 24 percent of adult New Yorkers ride a bike — that's well over 1 million people.

According to the "Green Wave" plan, 90 percent of bike fatalities occur in areas without protected bike lanes.

Mayor de Blasio started an initiative called the "Green Wave" plan to help protect cyclists because cyclist-related deaths and injuries are becoming a reoccurring issue on the streets of New York City. The Green Wave is an initiative that is part of "Project Zero."

DOT was given $58.4 million to help improve the city for cyclists. The "Green Wave" plan calls for DOT to build 30 miles of protected bike lanes each year. They will also be redesigning intersections to make them safer for everyone. NYPD will amp up enforcement, especially when it comes to high-risk activities such as: speeding, blocking bike lanes, failing to yield, and oversized vehicles.

Other initiatives include: working with truckers to help reduce conflicts between trucks and rides, new policies and legislation to protect cyclists, as well as a new education and outreach campaigns.

Additionally, DOT will be hiring 80 new employees to take on the "Green Wave."

Trump immigration official offers rewrite for Statue of Liberty poem

People pose for photos as they visit the Statue of Liberty on Liberty Island on Aug. 14, 2019, in New York City. On Tuesday, Acting Director of the Citizenship and Immigration Services Ken Cuccinelli reworked the words of the Emma Lazarus poem "The New Colossus" as he defended the Trump administration's immigration policies. The poem appears on a plaque inside the Statue of Liberty. The 1883 poem by Lazarus is often cited as an inspiration statement about America's attitude toward immigrants.

READER WRITE-INS:

SOME THOUGHTS ON WOODSTOCK

Fifty summers ago, a half-million young people came together on a dairy farm in Bethel for three days of peace and music. When the sky opened and rain thundered down, when the sun baked the ground — and food, space and toilets were spare — they kept their collective cool. They helped each other right through to Monday morning, when Jimi Hendrix, the final performer, blessed the faithful with his grace and beautiful feedback. Then, many stayed to help clean up the mess.

What does it all mean, Mr. Natural?

It means that despite the trying conditions, some of today's senior citizens did what should come naturally to all humans: they rose to the occasion.

And so, whether or not you were there, dig the fact that we are sisters and brothers, and we can exceed our own expectations ... with a little help from our friends. It's not a hippie dream. Happy 50th anniversary, Woodstock Nation, and to you who have come after.

Writer-director team Gene Stupinsky and Lee Eisenberg on letting 'Good Boys' be bad

The hilarious new comedy hits theaters this weekend. PAT KING

We hardly give kids the benefit of the doubt these days. In actuality, they probably have more of an understanding on what is going on than they may let on. The new film "Good Boys," out this weekend, explores that notion to such hilarious heights in one of the best surprise comedies of the summer.

The story follows three friends — Max, Lucas and Thor — played by actual young children Jacob Tremblay, Keith L. Williams and Brady Noon, respectively — who abandon school one day to go on an adventure to sell a valuable card from the popular Ascension card game in order to replace an expensive drone that the boys had accidentally destroyed. All the while, the boys are carrying drugs that they've mistakenly stolen from Max's next-door neighbor Hannah and her friend Lily, who are now chasing them across town.

The boys hope their plan goes off without a hitch before Max's father, played by Will Forte, gets home to see what they have done and, in turn, grounds them from going to their first "kissing party." Throughout their adventures, the boys drop F-bombs like they just heard the word for the first time and discuss things that are way over their heads with the sort of confidence that only kids that age could sensibly muster.

I caught up with Gene Stupinsky and Lee Eisenberg, who wrote and directed the film, to find out what it was like to coach such young children through some of the raunchy jokes they may not understand yet.

Part of what makes "Good Boys" so hysterical is seeing these three 12-year-old boys cursing up a storm and talking about things you would never expect. Do you think parents give children that age enough credit for what they actually know?

Gene Stupinsky: To be 12 is such a funny age. Your body is changing. Everything is just awkward. I just remember feeling awkward all the time. I was uncomfortable in my own skin. I think most 11- or 12-year-olds are.

Lee Eisenberg: I remember being in the car and driving home from karate with my mom and sister and just bursting out in tears for no reason. And my sister, who is younger, saying, "What's wrong with Lee?" And my mom whispering "hormones," and that made me cry even more because I couldn't control it.

Do you think the actors were too young to be fully "in on the jokes" of the movie?

GS: I don't think that they understand that their earnestness and awkwardness is what makes us laugh. I would say of the kids, maybe Brady, who plays Thor, was closest to see what the joke was.

But they're just too young to understand what it is about them that makes them funny.

LE: I can't wait for them to see this movie in 10 years!

LE: The funniest was when they would improvise occasionally and they would say the exact same line and just throw in an F-word. They thought that's what we were looking for!

In a way, were they just seeing what they could get away with?

GS: They were definitely seeing what they could get away with. I think that's natural at that age. It's funny because they're so sweet off-camera. They're not walking around swearing but I think they really enjoyed the opportunity to swear. They knew that they couldn't get in trouble for talking like that.

The boys find themselves stumbling upon some pretty raunchy things throughout their adventures. Were there some subjects that you had to dance around while filming?

GS: Yeah. One time we were doing a scene with a sex doll and they were positioning the sex doll and her dress came up. The boys saw that the doll was, say, "anatomically correct." They immediately had questions and Steven Merchant, who was there, brilliantly said, "This is for doctors to practice on in medical school." And they bought that! It made sense to them. A lot of it was like,

"Yeah, go ask your mom." We did not give them any information.

LE: We'd hang out with the kids, but it was not sex education [laughs].

While the film is full of hilarious moments, it also touches on the theme of growing past some of the first friends you have when you are a kid, when your interests begin to fall out of line with each other.

GS: We talked a lot about that age and when you start making choices on your own and your mom and your dad aren't saying, "Hey, you're going to hang out with these people because they live around the corner." You start kind of finding your way in the world a little bit more and you start announcing that you like karate or you like comic books or are into baseball. You start forging these bonds with the people that do what you do. I'm friends from when we were 6 or 7. But some of those people, we keep in touch because we have shared memories, and some of them it's because we're still interested in the same things.

Summer Cannibals get even with 'Can't Tell Me No'

We spoke with the band's lead singer, Jessica Boudreaux, ahead of their Brooklyn show this Saturday.

PAT KING

Portland indie-rock band Summer Cannibals have found a new motivating force within their band: revenge. Their new release, "Can't Tell Me No," bristles with white-hot energy, taking aim against the evils tearing down any hopes of a harmonious society. In layman's terms: It's just a kick-ass guitar-rock record in a world that desperately needs more of them. Unfortunately, the band's leader and guitarist, Jessica Boudreaux, and her longtime drummer Devon Shirley, had to go through hell between now and the release of their 2016 album "Full of It" for this new record to see the light of day.

"I feel like after 'Full of It,' I went into an identity crisis regarding the band," Boudreaux tells me over the phone, as the band begins to pile into their van ahead of their upcoming tour. "I wasn't sure what I wanted to do with it. The lineup at that point wasn't totally working. We stopped touring after that and I took some time off and I made a pop record. We just tried other things for a little bit. After a year and a half or something, we decided to go ahead and record another record. After we recorded that, Jenny, who was our bass player, left the band and we got Ethan Butman, who is now playing bass. Cassi Blum also joined the band, who is the guitar player. It was kind of like everything clicked into place."

But while things were starting to really get going for the band, a series of unfortunate setbacks occurred in the recording of what would become "Can't Tell Me No" — more specifically, in the form of a toxic relationship with a high-profile person in the indie-rock community who was assisting with making the record.

"It all started to feel excited and fun again," Boudreaux remembers. "We started to play shows and we were in the process of shopping this record that we had made and some s—t went down with someone who was involved in making it [who shall go unnamed at the request of Boudreaux]. We were forced into a situation where we had to trash the record just as we were about to sign a record contract [with Top Shelf records], of course."

Needless to say, the emotions tied to the finished record became extremely complicated. How would they proceed with such an ugly stain on what they had just created? So rather than release it, the band decided to scrap the record and re-record it on their own terms. Once the people at Top Shelf heard the new version of the record, they were more thrilled with it this time around.

"It's one of those situations where it sucked, but I 100 percent believe it was for the best," says Boudreaux on the decision to re-record the album, "because who wants to be out working your ass off to promote a record that is benefiting someone who should not be benefiting from it."

The record is dripping with defiance with songs like the title track, coming off as rallying cries against toxic masculinity with impassioned vocals and powerful guitar interplay between both Boudreaux and Blum. The band is currently on the road and will be making a stop this Saturday at Elsewhere in Bushwick with support from their great labelmates, Field Mouse, who will be releasing their new album, "Meaning," this Friday.

At this moment, Boudreaux could not be happier with the way things have turned out for the band. The lineup is as strong as ever and they have created an album together that they can truly be proud of, free of subtext.

"It's awesome that we get to tour this much in support of something that all four of us made together. It definitely helps with morale! Everyone feels invested equally," she says. As for the determination behind recording the new album to spite those who tried to stand in their way? She feels triumphant.

"It was definitely not sad," she says. "It was like, f—k it, let's do this. To me, I hear it in the record personally. There's a sense of purpose."

The bird sanctuary

Wings in preservation. Foz do Iguaçu's Bird Park underwent reformation to receive endangered species.

VANESSA SELICANI, MWNI

The Bird Park ("Parque das Aves" in Portuguese) in Foz do Iguaçu, Paraná, has changed to help save its most precious possession. It underwent two years of reformulation so that the space, a popular destination for those who visit the Iguazu Falls in Brazil, could become a sanctuary for endangered birds. There are 1,400 specimens of 140 different species, 90 percent of them native, of which 120 are at risk of extinction.

Before its redesign, visitors had contact with 30 percent of what were considered exotic birds.

"Of course we didn't abandon our friends. The birds that did not go to associated institutions are housed in a second property that we have," Carmel Croukamp, CEO of the institution, stated.

The park has existed for 25 years with the proposal of allowing visitors to have close contact with birds in nurseries immersed in 16 hectares of forest — almost unique opportunity to see and take photos with toucans and macaws, for example. Croukamp said the park wants to turn visitors into bird conservation allies.

"Most of our public lives in the Atlantic Forest domain. We also work in communicating to try to cause positive emotions so that people want birds nearby."

In addition to its public space, the park has areas for the reproduction and recovery of birds in danger of extinction.

"Many of the species that arrive here cannot be reintroduced into the forest. This is the case of victims of trafficking. They are treated so badly that 9 out of 10 die in transport. You can see the level of cruelty. We are the only ones that can receive many of these species," the CEO said.

Visitors who explore the Bird Park have contact with nurseries full of species such as the black-fronted piping

"They are very lovely birds that steal everyone's hearts," Croukamp said.

The end of the tour is crowned by the flight of 100 red macaws waiting for visitors.

SPORTS

From fantasy to dream team: METRO'S 2019 GUIDE TO FANTASY FOOTBALL

Metro's guide to all things Fantasy Football in 2019.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Break out those notes, your weird trophies, ridiculous superstitions and most importantly, your draft boards.

Fantasy Football season is upon us, allowing all of us to act as general managers while getting irrationally angry at small-market games that none of us care about here on the East Coast. You know, something like Cardinals, 49ers.

We all have that one friend who is losing his or her collective mind because George Kittle isn't getting enough targets.

If you don't know who George Kittle is, you will shortly.

August is prime time for Fantasy Football drafts around the world, annually pitting friends, colleagues and closet enemies against each other in a virtual game that has no bearing on the actual NFL season.

Yet Fantasy Football has continued to grow America's most popular sport even more as team owners will tune into almost any game as long as their players are in action.

With bragging rights — and a lot of money — on the line in most of your leagues, Metro is here to help you lift that gold-painted colander you call a trophy and ensure your 2019 Fantasy Football season is a success.

Over the next few pages, we'll take a look at the top fantasy players at every position, the top sleepers, busts, and how to properly select your team come draft day.

For those new to the Fantasy Football scene, here's a quick crash course of what that last sentence just meant.

SLEEPER: A player who is projected to be a lower-round selection but will exceed expectations. Basically, an afterthought that will do better than anyone thought.

BUST: A high-end talent that will struggle to put up big-time fantasy points for your team. Beware of the busts! Spending an early pick on one could unravel your team quickly.

Happy drafting!

WHEN SHOULD I DRAFT A QB?

Don't draft a quarterback earlier than the fourth round. There is always going to be that one team that panics and takes a quarterback early.

RESIST THE URGE.

The difference between the top QB and the 20th-ranked passer in average-fantasy-points-per-game last year was around 3.5. That's not going to destroy your hopes if you draft correctly.

WHEN SHOULD I DRAFT AN RB?

Take running backs early and often. These are playmakers that will get 20 to 30 touches per game and will have ample opportunities to put up big scores.

Try to take a dual-threat back like Saquon Barkley, Alvin Kamara or Le'Veon Bell. These are gifted pass catchers who are going to see a ton of the ball in 2019.

WHEN SHOULD I DRAFT A WR?

WRs can rack up big scores if they play in a pass-happy offense. Keep an eye on how many targets a pass catcher is projected to have this year.

The more targets, the better the chance is of big plays. Make sure to take note of TD poachers, as well. Big-bodied receivers are jump-ball threats in the end zone to boost your score quickly.

WHEN SHOULD I DRAFT A TE?

The only time it's acceptable to draft a tight end earlier on in the draft is if it's Travis Kelce, Zach Ertz or George Kittle. They are treated like wide receivers and will put up similar fantasy scores.

If those three aren't available, wait until you address your running backs, wide receivers, and your quarterback.

WHEN SHOULD I DRAFT D/ST?

Wait to draft a defense as one of your final selections in your draft. Defenses rarely put up monumental weeks that will tip the scales.

In fact, most of them put up eerily similar scores.

Last year, the average scores per week between the top-ranked defense (the Bears) and the 17th-ranked defense was approximately four points.
